FIGHTING FOR CROSS' LIFE. His Counsel Propose to Carry an Interest-

The next date for the execution of the death

Term and an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States was taken, the General the United States was taken, the General Term fixing the day for execution June 10. The Supreme Court of the United States declining to take jurisdiction Cross' counsel then sought his release, alleging that the order of the General Term postponing sentence to June was without warrant, and as January 22, the legal day for the execution, had passed, Cross must be considered legally dead and could not be held. The General Term dismissed the write and remanded the case to dismissed the writ and remanded the case to the Criminal Court, and on June 7 last Justice

Cox fixed November 11 for the execution. The counsel now propose to carry the question as to the legality of the sentence to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The case is in some respects, aside from the many legal points raised, a peculiar one. Cross had grown up in South Washington and when a boy caused the death of a companion by kicking him while fighting, and being convicted of manufactures arread a whort sentence in initial manslaughter served a short sentence in jail.

When he grew up he was employed as a driver in a coal yard. He was married a few months before the tragedy and lived with his motherin-law on 6th street southwest, and on the night of October 10, 1889, when he came from his work he dressed himself, saying that he was going to the theater. To this the wife demurred, stating that she would go out with him. Upon this it is alleged he threatened her. He left the house and she followed him, he ordering her back and she persisting. When on C near 7th street it is alleged he put the pistol to her head and fired, and as she fell he caught her. When some young men came up in-law on 6th street southwest, and on the night caught her. When some young men came up he first ran to her mother's house and informed the people there and then to his father's on 4% street, and coming back was arrested. Cross has persistently claimed that he did not fire the shot, and that she being jealous, finding that he would not return with her, shot herself.

The other features of the evening was the Columbian festival allegory in the Carnegie written and composed by Silas G. Pratt.

The chief feature of the evening at the Carlameness among the German soldiers in the negie Music Hall was the speech of Dr. Chauncey M. Depew. It was delivered after the festival march entitled, "The Empire State," which was dedicated, by the way, to Mr. Depew himself.

In his letter published on September 21 the correspondent noticed numerous cases of lameness among the German soldiers in the field, but during his stay in France did not remark one man who showed signs of suffering even after the hardest day's work.

Among other things he said: "This is an American night; I may say an American week, an American month, an American year and an American cantata. Tomorrow we begin a series of American celebrations that will continue until 1893. Other nations—Italy, Spain, France—are joining hands with us in doing honor to the memory of Columbus. Those in favor of holding on to the 69th Psalm claimed that no Psalm except the 22d so touchingly portrayed the sufferings of Christ, and that it was quoted by Christ Himself as applying to Himself. Those who opposed it did so on account of its strong denunciatory language, saying that it was out of place on such as count of place on such as count of place on such as count of the resonance upon in action than those perception who cannot endure the strain of the mountains situated parallel to the coast as far as the point of intersection of the 141st degree, in the said meridian line of the 141st degree, in its prolongation as far as the Crozen ocean.

This, I think, is the utmost that can be fairly said about the German soldier. I do not go to the length, because I think the criticism was not merited of the distinguished Prussian officer who the other day told me that the fighting spirit of their mountains situated parallel to the coast as far as the point of intersection of the 141st degree, in its prolongation as far as the Crozen ocean.

Dash and enthusiasm are first rate, but neither will ever fill the place, either in civil or military history, to be won by study, mastery or technique and faithful adhesion to improved methods in the discharge of human affairs. In France the system of military training remains much on the old basis. Germany, which has from time to time never hesitated to remodel her methods, has within the last ten years fairly revolutionized her old drill sergeant ways. It is almost incredible that Prussia, since the days of the great elector before all other countries in exacting clockwork and ramrod precision in drill, holdtor before all other countries low have reversed the process, and its officers be incessantly insisting upon intelligent free-dom of movement rather than exactitude, and high individual standard in place of dead uni-formity. Doubtless they have faults, from some of which their French rivals are happily free; on the other hand, they know their duty, attend with exemplary fidelity to its discharge and are proud of their position, regarding the work as of the utmost importance to the well-being of their native land.

The French soldier's ability to outmarch the German soldier is probably beyond question. This was noticed by military critics throughout the maneuvers of last year. The Telegraph correspondent noticed numerous cases of lameness among the German soldiers in the correspondent gives an interesting, though in-complete, account of what he observed of the euvers of the sixth French army corps under Gen. This force was attacked on two successive days and driven back. The operations were ordinarily driven back. The operations were ordinarily begun after careful skirmishing and heavy artillery fire. Although the formation of the troops was loose and ragged to a degree that would have given the horse guards a fit and driven the war office to contemplate resignation or suicide, the work was splendidly executed. The men were sent forward to the attack at the most advantageous points and there was far less 'huddling' than can sometimes be seen on the Foxhills. At that time the interior of the country was but little known, hence the insertion of the alternative line "ten marine leagues from the const." They claimed that it was the company's intention to establish the trolley system on that thoroughfare. The company denied this and passed a resolution declaring that only the cable would be laid.

solved that the resolution should be amended as follows: After the words "to be operated by power other than horses or locomotive steam power," to be inserted the words, "or the power known as the trolley system or any motive power operated by means of electricity through an overhead wire."

Alderman Harris then moved that the resolution as amended should be adopted. Alderman Morris could see no reason for such haste, and proposed that the matter lie over for a week. After a wrangle of several minutes the resolution was put, and was carried by 21 votes against 4. the royal party passed yards were manned and the royal party passed yards were manned and all naval honors paid.

A REMARKABLE CASE. An Indiana Man is Saved by a Dis-

A remarkable case has occurred in our territory. J. N. Berry, a man about thirty years of age, was going down rapidly. He tried physician after physician, patent medicines, home receipts—in fact, everything. He went to a noted sanitarium and returned no better. We all thought he was dying with consumption, and that only a few weeks of life were left for him.

He commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Gelden Medical Discovery, and at the same time commenced to mend. He has used about two dozen bottles, and is still using it. He has gained in weight, color and strength, and is able to do light work. It is just such a case as we should have listened to rather suspiciously, but when we see it, we must believe it.

It has trebled our sales of "Golden Medical Discovery." John Hackett & Son, Druggists, Roanoke, Ind.

GOING DOWN THE HILL

Old Age Creeping On Shows Itself in Lack-Lustre Eyes and Trembling Hands—Many Who Are Old in Years Are Vigorous and Healthy—How Such a Condition May Be Encompassed by All.

How many elderly men and women we see who plainly show they are "going down the hill."

The trembling hand, the uncertain step, the lack of brightness in the eye, the shrunken features, all indicate that life is not at high tide, that the strength and vital forces are not what they once were, and in fact that they are going down the hill. This, of course, is to be expected, for when one reaches sufficient had it not been that the franchise was to be sold at auction and if any one but the company in question secured it there would be nothing to prevent such persons from introducing the trolley. The committee on railroads of the common council having requested him to return the resolution for amendment the mayor accordingly did so, intimating that it would be approved if an amendment providing for the use of the cable were added. Mayor Grant said that he would approve no bills authorizing the use of the trolley system in New York.
